MODEL COMMONS TO MEET TONIGHT

Leslie Morris will be the LPP government's speaker in the Model Parliament to-night at 8 pm in the Union Ballroom. Morris, of Welsh Canadian extraction, works in Toronto as an organizer of the LPP.

When asked about their opinions of the LPP's bill to reduce Canada's Arms Budget, the presidents of the three other parties participating in the Model Parliament had this to say: Seymour Steinman, Liberal Party, "While in principle disarmament is much to be desired, world tensions do not allow Canada to take such moves. Brian Cuthbertson, Conservatives: "We feel that the bill is ill-timed, because disarmament at the present would place Canada in a position where she could not properly defend herself. We do, however, agree with the principle of disarmament."

Stanley Nemiroff, CCF: "Of course everybody is in favour of disarmament in principle, but now it is a matter of expediency. We think this country can now afford a substantial decrease in its arms budget, and put the money to better use in combatting international Communism by increased and expanded Colombo Plan aid."

AUS MEETING

A panel discussion on "Art and Architecture" will be held tonight under the sponsorship of the Architecture Undergraduate Society. The discussion will take place at 8 pm sharp in the School of Architecture, University St.

Taking part will be Agnes Lefort, of the Lefort Galleries, Robert Fleming, noted architect, and Robert Ayre, Art Critic for the Montreal Star.

CAMPUS QUEENS EXCITED AS CARNIVAL CONTEST NEARS

"Very excited and thrilled," "stunned," "flabbergasted," "surprised and pleased," "honoured", were some of the adjectives used by Carnival Queen candidates in describing their reactions on learning they had been chosen as semi-finalists.

The five girls, Sybil Beck, Carol Eaton, Holly Higgins, Jackie Magnan, and Enid Pottel, expressed their pleasure as they were caught between appearances at various spots on campus. They will spend the next few days being introduced to different faculties, at dinners and gatherings, and on the radio. They will be introduced to the student body at large at the Student Society meeting on Friday at 1 pm in the Union Ballroom. Elections will be held on Wednesday, February 15 in many buildings on the campus, and the winner will be crowned at Forum Night, Friday, February 17th.

Sybil Beck
Sybil Beck is a blond, curly-haired 18-year old, who expects to go into merchandising and retailing when she graduates. In the meantime she concentrates on political science, economics, and English and participates in the work on athletics nights, Winter Carnival, Combined Charities, and the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society.

Carol Eaton
Carol Eaton, 19, is tall and blond. She is interested in all sports, but particularly in skiing, and she spends many weekends up north skiing. Asked about her plans after she finishes McGill, she confessed, "I haven't any idea". Right now she is studying languages.

Holly Higgins
Holly Higgins, third carnival Queen candidate, is a university scholar who currently holds the Margueret Jane Allen scholarship

AMENDMENTS WANTED BEFORE AFFILIATION

Whether or not to rejoin the National Federation of Canadian University Students will be the main point at issue on the Friday meeting of the Students' Society. A motion has been submitted to Avrum Cohen, President of the Students' Society providing for McGill re-entrance to NFCUS, if certain key changes are made in the NFCUS constitution. McGill withdrew last winter after a motion for withdrawal had passed at a Students' Society meeting by the vote of 293-238.

This is the motion that has been submitted:

RECONIZING that the idea of a National Federation of Canadian University Students is basically a good one

REAFFIRMING that on the basis of principle (alone) we, the students of McGill University, should be members of such an organization

NOTING, however, that the National Federation has done very little in the past to justify its existence

BELIEVING that if properly organized N.F.C.U.S. could perform a great deal of services to students in addition to embodying the thoughts, ideals of the Canadian University Student and representing him at international gatherings

REALIZING that there exists no such thing as a "cure all" for N.F.C.U.S., or for any other organization for that matter — but it is possible to alter a week foundation, making it a strong one to enable the building of a concrete structure

THEREFORE be it resolved that we, the students of McGill University, rejoin N.F.C.U.S. next fall provided that the National Conference accepts at least half of the major changes that will be drafted by the originators of this resolution, in coordination with the S.E.C. and other Universities. Should this fail, we shall NOT rejoin N.F.C.U.S.

These changes are to include

1. A decrease of 20% in N.F.C.U.S. membership fees, to be counterbalanced by inviting all Canadian Colleges to join the National Federation

2. A strengthening of local committees by legislating a) rules as to their purpose, function, activities, duties of officers, etc.

b) a constitutional clause requiring local committees to hold open mass meetings where the students could decide policy

c) a larger budget at the expense of the National Office so that they could be able to carry out a well organized programme of activities

3. Reinforcing the contact and control of the National Executive, with local committees, thus making N.F.C.U.S. a strong Union instead of a week, loosely knit Federation. As such it will be able to efficiently co-ordinate local activities on a National basis.

4. Making N.F.C.U.S. more representative by allowing each college one vote for every 2000 students. A motion to this effect has already been adopted by two of the four regional councils.

BISHOPS WINS IUDL FINALS

Last night in the vast emptiness of the Union Ballroom, before three judges, a chairman, and an audience consisting of the wife of one of the judges, teams from McGill and Bishop's Universities met in the championship debate of the eastern section of the Inter-University Debating League. The Bishops team won a 2-1 decision.

At Bishop's University, the McGill team of Brahm Campbell and David Freedman were declared winners on a split decision. Although McGill won at Bishop's University and vice-versa, the teams were not tied. The Bishop's team accumulated more points than the McGill team and therefore won the championship of the Eastern section.

Representing Bishop's University at McGill were Owen Evans and Paul Gibson. The McGill team consisted of Harold Ashenmil and Phil Shaposnick.

The topic under discussion was: "Resolved, that Canada should have a Separate Codified Bill of Rights." The three judges, David J. Dohan, Rolland La Prairie and Andy De Wilde, chose the upholders of the affirmative, Bishop's University on the basis of 100 mark scoring system. 50 per cent was for style and the remaining 50 per cent was awarded for the material provided.

Editorial

REDUCTIO AD ABSURBEUM

One of the major annoyances of living in the province of Quebec is the inconvenience caused by the damnable interference exercised by the movie censors. Their indiscriminate hacking out of slices of movies has resulted in a series of absurdities that in essence give us short weight for the money we pay at the box office.

In recent months, several movies have been completely transformed or rendered meaningless. Because, apparently, "divorce" is a dirty word in this province, "Love is a Many Splendored Thing" was reshaped and trimmed to eliminate this word, and, in the process, ruin the plot and leave the audience guessing. Rattigands' "The Deep Blue Sea" was censored in such a way that the whole point of the plot was missed. By the omission of certain scenes, the implication was that the heroine was married to a man with whom she was merely having an affair. Some of the scenes from "The View from Pompey's Head" were so cut that, instead of seeing a close clinch and kiss between a married man and another man's wife, the audience saw only the beginning and end of the clinch. At the end of the movie, where the hero does the right thing, and bids farewell to the heroine with a brotherly kiss, we are allowed to see in full this erotically stimulating action. The audience reaction to this was noteworthy — it consisted of an ironic round of applause.

The censors, in their attempts to tailor the morality of movies to conform with an outdated code, are rendering themselves and the movies absurd. If this process continues, it will be necessary to hand out synopses of the plot at the door, or insert subtitles such as "Here Mr. X kisses Mrs. Y". This form of censorship satisfies no-one, least of all the viewer, the person who pays to enjoy a movie. If the censors have not the courage to ban a movie outright, and risk public wrath, they certainly do not have the right to alter movies so that they are devoid of all meaning.

WORTH ATTENDING

The first of two model parliaments will be held this evening in the Ballroom of the Union. The reaction of the average student to this news is likely to be "So What"? Apart from the members of the hard cores of the political parties on the campus, the announcement of this event seems to have aroused most of the student body to a frenzy of indifference.

In a country where politics have settled into a very placid state, this indifference could be justified by some as the right attitude to take towards politics. Indifference in politics is never the right attitude — government in a democracy is the concern of every individual. More especially should it vitally concern the student — the future leader of the community.

The bill to be introduced by the LPP concerns a 25% reduction in Canada's arms budget for the coming year. As worded, it provides considerable scope for controversy, and there is liable to be many fiery moments. Parliamentary procedure will be followed but it is doubtful that this will act as a deterrent in curbing the enthusiasm of either the government or the members of the Opposition.

The model Parliament offers the student an opportunity to see, in miniature, how Parliament itself operates. It is worth attending both as a lesson in Civics and an experience of political debating.

NEW CLUB

Sir:

Thank you for your courage in publishing Mr. Brookes' outstanding article, "The New Look in Chastity". It has such an original viewpoint and provides so comprehensive an answer to a difficult problem that no reader could but sympathize with the writer's frustrating dilemma. I was particularly fascinated by it for it throws some light on a parallel problem of my own.

You see, dear sir, I have a maddening impulse which is keeping me awake at nights: I have a repressed desire to murder. Unfortunately, (as most undergraduates will be quick to perceive,) some cloistered fanatic of ancient religion decided somewhere in the dim past that this normal, natural impulse for revenge and cruelty should be denied all healthy young men like myself. (All young men, of course, wish to kill: if they deny this, both Freud and myself will call them liars.) Now why should a religious fanatic govern my society or my own life? If I wish to murder my roommate tonight, why should I be put off with only sharpening my razor blades and reading "True Horror Comics"? And if any religious jokers should write in and say something about "the Golden Rule" or "the Divine Order" or "the good of society", let them go off to Africa and impose their religious inhibitions on more gullible natives.

How can we know if murder is right or wrong until we've tried it? Like Brookes, I suggest that we find out for ourselves: at time of registration, each freshman should be issued with three "murder licenses" — and surely only after three experiences in the gentle art of bloodshed can he know the true joy of destroying another; then he will be fit to decide on his own whether to abstain from murder or to plunge into the deeper experiences of life — free from religious inhibition and moral restraint. Perhaps Mr. Brookes and I can join forces and form a new campus club: "The McGill Pro-adultery and Murder Society". Even theologs might be invited to recruit.

What Happened

Sir:

We, the undersigned, feel that a grave injustice has been committed! Several Montreal daily newspapers ran a photograph of OUR five campus cuties who are running for Carnival Queen (Sybil, Carol, Holly, Jackie, and Enid) yet the McGill Daily, OUR paper, did not. Which one of you damn fools boobed?

DEMOCRACY AT WORK

by Peter Regenstreif

We attended the Professional Tennis matches featuring Jake Kramer and his wizards last Friday night at the Forum. Besides being terribly impressed by the slick display that was served up by the world's best, we were also astounded at the new practice that has arisen in affairs of this sort. We are referring to spectator participation in the umpiring.

The score was 15 — love and in the next volley, the ball was hit just in bounds or so the spectators thought.

"Out!" intoned the linesman. "30 — love!" informed the umpire from his lofty perch.

"In!" yelled the more boisterous segment of the crowd. "15 all!" The linesman was becoming a bit cowed and now merely motioned with his hands that the ball was out. By now a large majority of those in attendance gave vent their ire in communicating to the officials their opposing verdict. All eyes turned on that unfortunate official who had made the poor call. The best he could muster was a shrug of the shoulders. So it was up to the umpire seated high among the gods.

"Correction," he corrected, "15 — all!" — loud cheers and hoots from the gallery.

The game progressed without further mishap.

The above accounted by-play is, we feel, a good thing in this democratic age of ours. There's too much of this spectator sport business.

Let's have some more participation — it's good for the health, or so our physician told us during our last check-up.

What the suggestion is will now be evident. We are advocating that the spectators hold the balance of power in the decision-making or, shall we say, umpiring process. Thus when an obviously poor decision is reached by an official, spectators can get their full money's worth by changing the decision on the spot without having to write letters to the Editor or having to bother their Federal M.P.

Of course, this is postulating a sane, calm and "classy" crowd — on a par with the one at the Atwater Avenue emporium last week-end. The system would undoubtedly fail in a crazed atmosphere such as prevails south of the border. The citizens of this fair city, on the other hand, have demonstrated on more than one occasion, their coolness and impartiality in the face of both sportive and civic difficulties and we strongly urge that this system be incorporated around here immediately. And McGill should take the lead — but then again the lack of spectators at the intercollegiate contests would still leave the umpiring in the hands of those despots of the Intercollegiate Union.

It's still worth a try. Didn't the Greeks employ juries ranging from two to five-hundred? Let the glory that was Rome's be ours.

MDBWA BASKETBALL STATISTICS MONNOT LEADING SCORER

The Western Mustangs are well on the way to their eleventh consecutive basketball championship this year. Johnny Metras' Mustangs have beaten every team in the league at least one time and are now sporting a record of six wins and no defeats.

McGill dropped from second place to a tie for fourth place as a result of their double loss over the weekend. Queen's also lost twice over the weekend and are now in last place with five losses and no victories.

Individual statistics are still incomplete but they do show quite definitely that Ray Monnot, the 6 ft. 6 in. centre of the Mustangs is on his way to the scoring championship. Although he was held to less than 20 points for the first time this year by the Redmen, Monnot still has a large margin over his nearest rival, Don Wright.

The Redmen's rookie guard saw his average tumble over the weekend against the powerful Mustangs and he now is being pressed for the runner-up spot by John Dacyshn of Toronto.

Leon DuPlessis, who won the scoring crown last year, is having trouble finding the range this season, and is down in ninth place with an average of 12.4 points.

McGill Sponsors Ski, Badminton Meets

For the first time McGill will sponsor an Intramural ski meet for coeds. The events will take place on Feb. 21 at the University of Montreal Hill.

This meet will be an inter-faculty competition. There will be races for the novice skier as well as for the expert. Novelty races will be an exciting feature of the meet, and everyone is encouraged to enter. Sign up on the R.V.C. Notice Board.

Intercollegiate Badminton
Urgent! McGill will be hosting the Intercollegiate Badminton Tournament this Friday and Saturday morning, and the badminton committee is in dire need of girls to act as linesman and perform other such duties. No experience is required. If anyone is free at any time between 9:30-4:00 on Friday or 10-12 on Saturday, here is an excellent opportunity to help out. You can offer your services by signing up at the Athletics Board at R.V.C. or by speaking to someone in the Phys. Ed. Office at R.V.C.

McGill's squad will consist of three Pats, Misses Shivers, Gardner and Mowatt, and Liz Loebel.

FENCING NOTICE

The Daily Reviews . . .

THE GREY CUP REPLAYED

by Earl Sandy

This exciting film shown in Technicolor for the first half, and in black and white for the second half, black and white being used because the Als colors had been disgraced and at this time black was more appropriate, was seen in Room 306 of the Engineering building sometime ago. The reason for the lateness of this review is that the reviewer had another breakdown in seeing the Als go down to defeat again, and was just released from a notorious Montreal institution.

There were 64 main characters plus a cast of some 40,000 others. The main stars were people with non-Hollywood names like Etcheverry, Patterson, Parker, Meinart, and the ending was not in the true style of "and they lived happily ever after", but rather sad.

The theatre or lecture room if you prefer was not quite filled to capacity, but several interesting guests were present. The sound track was too loud, but this could not be helped as the sound of people munching their lunches had to be drowned out. The film started to the cries of "close those damn lights . . . shut the %%% door . . . C'mon I got a two o'clock lab . . . get your elbow out of my eye . . . get your eye outa my elbow . . . who'll trade two peanut-butter for a salmon . . . hey bring me back a milk wit yah . . . Charlie, don't leave me . . . etc."

First we saw a picture of bright yellow clad figures, the Edmonton Eskimos. They were greeted by a chorus of boos and a slight cheer which immediately faded to an agonizing cry followed by a dull thud.

Then the favorite Als made an appearance to loud cheers. Then came the greatest roar of the day as the screen flashed. This motion picture presented by Doe Brewery. The thundrous ovation swept across the campus causing severe readings on the seismograph in the PSC. The handclapping and desk pounding which occurred at this moment was longer and louder than that which occurred at Ottawa when the last world war ended.

The thrilled patrons then settled down to the business at hand and the next scene depicted the parade. When a baton swinging girl came into focus, the crowd roared again and turned menacingly as the picture left the screen. The operator took one look at the crowd who by this time were waving their T-squares like machetes and reversed the camera to the approving yells of triumph. After the parade we saw the opening ceremonies when the two mayors came to the centre of the field. This was greeted by mixed cheering?

Then the game started and as the Als scored the cheers resounded throughout the building.

When the Esks scored, only the noise of the slow eaters munching on their peanut brittle could be heard. Then as the fans drained their pints of . . . milk (?) they showed their disapproval of the officiating by hurling the cartons (empty) at the screen.

Everyone was happy at half-time — then the film changed to black and white and the outlook of the game turned to just black. Some people, having seen the actual filming, had a knowledge of the outcome of the film and left. Others, the real big eaters, continued gnawing on apples, etc.

As the Esks ran up the score, more people left and gradually texts and notebooks began to appear on the scene as frantic and frustrated men hurried to finish their labs and assignments. It was obvious that the film was no longer the centre of interest. The only prolonged outbreak of cheering came in the third quarter when the sign "Presented with the compliments . . . etc." again appeared on the screen. This roar was almost as loud as the previous one, but we could see that it had decreased in volume by a factor

Official Release

NEW RINK WILL NOT BE USED — GRIFFITHS

Mr. Harry Griffiths, McGill's director of athletics has announced officially that the new hockey rink will definitely not be opened this year. This definitely cancels all plans and hopes that the hockey Redmen might be able to play the last two games of the intercollegiate schedule on home ice.

At the start of the year it was hoped that the much publicized stadium would be finished in February and be available for use in March. Insuperable construction difficulties have made it obvious that a lot of the facilities in the new ice arena could not possibly be available as scheduled.

The stadium by March will lack a public address system, adequate locker facilities and an adequate seating system. Although Mr. Griffiths had previously recommended use of the rink in March, the above mentioned difficulties have prompted him to recommend to Dr. James that use of the rink be postponed for this year.

In a letter received yesterday, Dr. James has agreed with Mr. Griffiths' recommendations, and the official opening of McGill's winter arena will be held next fall, probably early November.

This decision leaves the local pucksters out on a limb, as two home games have been scheduled to be played on home ice. This will necessitate either a change of venue, with the games played either at the forum or at the Verdun auditorium.

The Juilliard Quartet which will perform here Thursday night. The concert will be held at 8:30 in Redpath Hall.

SEATS STILL AVAILABLE

"Wet Paint" goes into its final night tonight. The Revue has been running since last Thursday, and tonight marks the last chance for students to see the show.

Tickets for tonight's performance are still available, and may be obtained in the Arts Building basement from 10 am to 2 pm, and in the Union lobby from 12-2 pm.

Revue officials expressed the desire that as many students as possible get to see the show. Ron Clark, Producer of "Wet Paint", said that many students "never see the Revue from beginning to end of their stay at McGill. This year, we think we have something to offer them. No one main theme is followed, and this type of "revue revue," we think, appeals to all."
